

Jewish

Radicalisation it must be addressed from a general point of view and not a specific one, which does not exist. If there were one, it would be the same as the Christians' or Muslims' or others'.

Radicalization, today, defines a commitment in a political project, based on a given ideology that rejects pluralism and diversity in society

Bahai

So you can struggle with the intellect, with understanding with words, with peace, it is a struggle but without using weapons. Valuing young people means serving humanity.

Islam Imam

Our community is the first victim of this radicalization, of this blind terrorism that has no religion. Terrorism has no religions

Soka Gakkai

Radicalization derives from ignorance and non-education. In fact, where there is more radicalization there is less education and there is less culture, there are fewer people trying to emerge, there are governments that do not allow emancipation

Catholic

I think we have to learn to listen, avoid judging too fast, present our faith in a relatable manner and discuss issues in vertical relationships

Catholic Priest

It is clear, radicalisation is really fought by the Catholic Church and there is a genuine willingness to dialogue with others, and to promote peace

Orthodox

Radicalization is the temptation to only see yourself and to be egocentric.

My message for the young people about radicalisation is: You can see yourself only in relation with others.

Adventist & Baptist

Radicalization is a phenomenon linked to liberalism, because we live in a world where everything is blurred (Ad)

Radicalization is a sort of approach results in some people not willing to have anything to do with other people. (Bp)

Evangelical Reformed

Radicalization really means turning away from God, and getting more towards a human being, deifying oneself.

This is an old mechanism, not to mention the divide and conquer rule (Lat. divide et impera).

Catholic

Radicalization can be found not only in the religious sphere, this is a very complex phenomenon, any simplification in this case is a bad practice.

Islam Representative

About terrorism, I call them "Islamised radicals", and not "radicalised Muslims", so they are people who have reach a breaking point with society, family, or even the community, and who put an Islamic varnish on all this to shout their hatred, their rejection of a society that, in fact, has not accepted them.
